Q: Using result of sql query in second, results of the first query (deterministic order) still being returned I have a query that uses a variable: `SELECT.... FROM SOME_TABLE WHERE id_col = @id`; This query has a result set and I want to use this result to construct another query. When I do this, the first query is run and the variable has the value I want it to, but still the first query's result set comes back. The second query is never called since the result set has been used up (and I'm in a loop of running this query over and over). How do I fix this so that I can use the result of the first query in the second query?

A: You could use something like `DECLARE @id integer SELECT @id = 1 SELECT * FROM (SELECT.... FROM SOME_TABLE WHERE id_col = @id) a` if you want to call a sub-query.
