Create a new game by pressing ESC, choosing Tyrant's Blessing, and pressing Enter. For those of you who don't know how to edit their files, look in Games\BOOSTED for a file called Tyrant'sBlessingGameMenu.xml and make the appropriate changes there. To add a quest window instead of the title screen, change the value of 'n'. Then do this again, choosing the NPCM window in the new screen: For the name change, the game will crash, but you should be able to start it again. Make the appropriate changes, and when the game crashes again change the number to 'n+1' and start it up. Also, it seems that the NPCM window for afterlevel01 sets the path of the game to nothing, so either remove the 'gamepath' line or rename or move the path directory. This doesn't seem to crash the game, but it changes the name of the game you're playing to "The. And it resets the 'owner' of the game to yourself. That's kind of annoying, so you might want to rename that thing to something else. Also, the UnilagOss.dll in the path of the.xml sets the name of the game to 'UNILAGOSSS,' or the correct spelling is 'UnilagOss' without the S. If you have a modded game, you will have to go to the.xml file, and change the /edit/Game/Art/E_Initial.png value to a file with the same name but with an E on the end. Again, the game will crash, but it should start again after that. Change the /edit/Game/GameMenu/Intro.xml to say, "Level menu." The 'level' is a counter that goes from 0 to 1, but you can't get past level 01. Mod Menu: (No AI for me yet.) As of 1.0.6, the mod menu is available through BOOSTED. Click on Add Item (Add Effects). Click on New Entry. A list of effects will be displayed. Select the free 'breath' effect, and click on 'Delete'. Scroll down, and select the string if 'hero_gift1_delete.' If you want multiple strings, select all and hit the "Add" button. Then click on OK, and delete all the others. Click on 'Apply' to save the new setting.

In an attempt to avoid the publicity - and possible filming locations - of the Tulip Festival, the city of Lubbock drew the ire of residents and business owners for its decision to bring back the one-year-old festival. "I don't see how we can do that in this day and age," Lubbock resident Mark Bigler said. "It's a tradition that goes back to the 1800s when there was nobody here." School Superintendent Daniel Cooper said the perception is, incorrectly, that the city is downtown-based, only pertaining to the university district. "It is only held here for the educational purposes it brings to the campus," Cooper said. "It's an academic event, but it is a tourism event as well. We need to be careful when we make statements about it not being appropriate for the downtown area because that is the only place it is being held." Cooper said that to date, there's been no large protest of the festival. In fact, he said dozens of students and faculty participate, but it isn't an advertised event on campus. However, attendees are required to spend $5 on game tickets. Cooper, who is on the Tulip Festival Committee, was shocked that festival organizers didn't seek input on the annual event. "We give them the opportunity to meet and interact with folks, and this year, unfortunately, they decided not to do that," Cooper said. According to KOTV-TV, residents have been against the festival since the beginning. One comment drew mixed reaction on Facebook when it was posted by a Tulip Festival Committee member. "We look forward to having the Tulip Festival in Lubbock, and are proud that you can enjoy a taste of the great Spring weather in Lubbock," the member wrote. "We asked for suggestions on when to move it to but they said they would be 'happy' with the present schedule. There is a misconception that the downtown bustles during Tulip time, which simply is not the case." Following a report by KOTV-TV, the Lubbock City Council voted unanimously to cancel the Tulip Festival in late May. However, a festival participant who wished to remain anonymous said festival supporters may have been misled.

There are many different types of spaces in Somnium Space. In Somnium Space we are building an open world virtual reality economy, a place where the player can go to invest their money and use it to trade, transport goods and services. In this way, the player can grow their wealth and become a leader in the world. The goal is for each player to have their own space (or “farms”) that they own. These farms can be made out of land (blue space), structures (red space) or vehicles (green space). If they have enough wealth, they can buy or build more. If they have enough friends, they can then share the wealth they have earned with them. If they are creative, they can also become a builder, and create new structures and vehicles for their friends to enjoy. A farming system in Somnium Space will allow each player to have their own personal space, where they are given a choice of farms to own. The player then owns their own land, structures, vehicles and supplies. Together, a group of people can work together and build a variety of things. Each farmer can grow the vegetables and herbs they want to grow, and they also have the option to buy livestock, and then sell the game’s virtual currency for real currency. Each farmer can grow any number of crops and can choose to sell them or keep them to use later, or to improve their farms. The land can then be improved by planting and harvesting crops, by building more plots or structures, and by purchasing livestock. Somnium Space will allow players to experience a life in virtual reality. The purpose of Somnium Space is to give the player an experience that they could never expect, even with use of the latest cutting edge VR technology. You can really own and build your own virtual reality farm, and experience all the possibilities that this opens up. Being an Open, Social and Persistent Virtual Reality world, Somnium Space will be opened up to the public at large, so anyone can join and participate. You will find that you can buy land from other players, or you can share land if you want to build something and grow some virtual crops or vegetables. With enough friends, you will be able to trade or find other players with whom to enjoy and share things, so you can be sure that there will always be enough people to enjoy Somnium Space. Embark on a journey into the next great, virtual reality economy and experience
