Player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions are being captured by 22 high-motion-capture players, including ex-professional footballers and EA's own motion capture team. The captures are being used to improve the underlying physics of each player in the game, with the goal being for the game to be able to react to a player's real-life actions. "We had a great partnership with FIFA where we could experiment with our technology in terms of making sure the game feels alive," says Erich Clement, senior gameplay engineer at SIE London Studio. "We are happy to share that we are using our data and know how to deliver an authentic football experience." Hybrid player models designed to give more realistic look and feel to the action Since the last iteration of FIFA, the team have been observing players, including Ronaldo, Hazard and Kante in training and competition. This data is being used to refine the underlying physics of each player, with the goal being for the game to feel more realistic. Player movements now have more motion and are faster and more reactive to challenges, tackling and tackling techniques are more brutal, and on-ball behaviour more realistic. "If you think about a defender or attacker, the moment they hit the ball, they move in a different direction, they move faster," Clement says. "It's the same for headers. They move in a different direction, they move faster, they aim differently." The hybrid player models featured in FIFA 22 feature a combination of both animated and real-life player data. Players will have animations in the default setting, but by adjusting the settings can be switched to completely real-life movements. Players will have a unique animated expression based on how they play the game, and their clothing will also have an effect on their animation. Players will also have their own unique face, hair and skin, based on the player's appearance in real life. "What we wanted to do is really make the face of a player uniquely his own," says Mike D'Andrea, senior gameplay engineer at SIE London Studio. "We have a new system where we can use a photo of an actor, and we can then apply that to our athlete in real time. A photo can be completed in a matter of days,

What's new in Fifa 22:

- Reflective surface technology: FIFA 22 gets ready for the local ghosts and goblins, ghosts and robbers, and goblins and robbers. We've further augmented the Adrenalin Aura Engine to maintain higher and more consistent fluidity, and the game will dynamically adjust reflection based on the amount of light, time of day, local terrain elevation, and more. Reflection gets deeper as the sun goes down, and more peaky as you get closer to the sun and shadow retreats.
- Reflective animations: An improved animation reflector system will react dynamically to the environment. Animals in the environment will reflect in the distance, animation reaction to environmental change and collision events will occur throughout the environment, and artificial reflections will add detail around the player and improve lifelike looks.
- Reflective lighting system: Dynamic lighting that reflects what's around. Shaded surfaces reflect light differently based on their material type. Have a match on the beach in the dark and water can make a dramatic difference when traveling in a glass-less boat.
- Volumetric detail: The volumetric detail system will create, define and destroy volumetric detail within the game. Dynamic details like Puddles, Rocks, and Grass will be generated on the ground, and can impact important play and player run-up areas. Onside structures will be highlighted as the opposition moves between platforms, and detailed items like the ball will have an increased reflection factor.
- Improved animations: A variety of new animations have been added including more dynamic transitions and lifts. More detail will increase impact when players travel through and interact with objects.
- ESP shoes: In the game you can find the exclusive Green Bay Packers Superbowl XXV rings with an authentic feel to the famous NFL football rings. Customise your player's gamewear and use these chips to display the player's personal favourite player.
- Touchline Hologram: Now you can experience the ultimate in on-pitch excitement with an all-new touchline Hologram feature. Bring your opponents team and players to life by standing right behind the playing surface to add a dynamic touchline, and get the crowd involved in the game
