ANDROID:The object of this proposal is to examine the inhibitory capacity of certain environmental chemicals and carcinogens to inhibit the solubilization of membrane components by detergents. Under the same conditions the solubilization of the carcass protein of E. coli will be investigated. The solubilization is defined as the formation of the protein coat on the membrane surface. The proposed research will attempt to relate the inhibitory capacity of chemicals to the solubilization of membrane components. To achieve this aim the following studies are proposed: (1) Determine the mechanism of the inhibitory capacity of chemicals to the solubilization process and thereby prove or disprove the current hypothesis about the inhibitory capacity. (2) Determine the amino acid sequence of the carcass protein of E. coli which is to be solubilized by detergents. (3) Determine the relationship between the solubilization of membrane components by detergents and lipid solubilization. (4) Study the solubilization of phospholipids and carcass protein on E. coli and determine the requirement of metal ions and of phospholipids for solubilization.Tasmanian senator says she may boycott the February 8 poll Tasmanian senator Jacqui Lambie says she may boycott the upcoming election following claims it is being fixed against the Liberals.
