Canada announced it would begin negotiating the new cross-border rules for people, goods, services and digital content on Sept. 1, setting a deadline for a two-year negotiation to wrap up before the deal officially goes into effect on Jan. 1, 2019. However, Commerce Minister Francois-Philippe Champagne has now pushed back that deadline to Nov. 20. In a notice sent to corporate representatives, he explained the delay is due to a need to "accelerate the consultation on the issues at stake" and ensure that the negotiating texts are "available in sufficient time to enable the exchange of frank and informed opinions. the content of the chapters from their initiation," Mr. Champagne wrote in a statement. The warning came as India's trade minister and U.S. President Donald Trump were meeting in Washington, D.C., to discuss the newly renegotiated NAFTA. They were among those invited to meet with Mr. Champagne.

The Commerce Minister said "it is critically important that Canada is fully ready to begin the negotiation of Chapters 19, 20 and 21 of NAFTA" when the president's Cabinet meets at the White House on Tuesday. NAFTA Chapter 19 is about the rules-of-origin to be applied to trade in goods. The US has threatened to apply high duties to car and auto parts exported to the U.S. if it does not receive a "durability safeguard" that would prevent parts from being re-exported into the U.S.
