The world is on the brink of a new war. The conflict is global and the scale is massive. The resources and facilities needed to fight a global war require enormous investment. To provide that investment the world must be safe. For this reason they created the Royal Air Force A4 Force. This force is made up of the RAF GR5/7 Harrier Jump Jet and the USMC AV8B Harrier. British Aerospace designed the GR5/7 to provide the RAF and Royal Navy with the world's first true VTOL fighter jet. The US military had been flying the AV8B Harrier Jump Jet since 1977. Both Harrier variants have a similar performance in combat. The GR5/7 is a true multi-role fighter, able to perform ground attack, air defense, reconnaissance and tactical strike missions. The AV8B Harrier is a fighter that is very maneuverable and equipped with advanced avionics. The Harrier is best known as the transport for the Pegasus nuclear bomb and as a unique weapon platform. You'll take to the air as a NATO pilot in each campaign and engage in 10 high intensity day and night missions. Gameplay: Fly an RAF GR5/7 or USMC AV8B Harrier Three campaigns: Falkland Islands, Hong Kong,

The Historical InsigniaThe objects of the operation are the following:Build and defend Gubarevo on the right bank of the Don river, cut off its left wing along the border.Build fortifications and trenches of the enemy, on the opposite bank of the river, on the height above the road Do - Merkin (the bridge is not included in the planning operation).The operation does not include the capture of the area, which will be carried out by the "Komdiv" Kokkinos from operational group 4.In the game you can only occupy one of the following command points:And the player has access to the following organizational, general and operational resources, while this is not forbidden:Territory:Advance:Build fortification:Control the fortification:The deployment of the command point.Troops:The task of the commanders of the game, they are the only tactical units available. The depth of the allocation of units is carried out according to the strategic objective of the operation.The strategic decision, will indicate whether to attack or occupy the heights and forested areas of the south bank of the Don, in order to relieve fortifications and create a gap in the enemy's line of defense, to avoid a direct attack on the enemy's main defensive stronghold (Gubarevo). If successful, this may allow the destruction of the Voronezh group and reach the river Don. In this case the operation should not result in the encirclement of the Voronezh group and there is no possibility to capture the crossings of the Don river.Objective:Wake and retreat From Kokkinos Group.The duration of the operation (3 days in practice) depends on the weather conditions (2 days is the most favorable) and the terrain, the commander decides whether to retreat or to maintain his position. A single sheet of graphene is an allotrope of carbon that is stable in the sense that it doesn't exist in another form at the same temperature and pressure. Graphene is a banded sp2-hybridised allotrope of carbon, as opposed to the allotrope diamond. Graphene is attracting much interest recently as a major new flat class of 2D carbon sheet with a wide range of potential applications due to its unusual physical properties. Above all, the discovery of its unique banded structure gives rise to many new physical, chemical, mechanical, and electronic properties. FIGS. 1A, 1B, and 1C show respectively graphitic structures 1A, 1B, and 1C. 2D planar carbon-based materials include graphene, graphite, carbon nanotubes, carbon nanofoils, carbon membranes, carbon foils, carbon brushes, carbon nanofoils, carbon sheets, graphene perchloroethene gel (porous graphene), carbide/sulfides, fullerenes, graphite foils, carbon fibers, and carbon monofilaments. Graphene is a monovalent covalent C sheet that is arranged with two-dimensional hexagonal structure. In graphene, carbon atoms are very precisely and closely packed. Graphene is the thinnest carbon material that exhibits metallic properties. In the past decade, graphene has captured much attention and developed rapidly in many fields. In 2004, a discovery in semi-conducting graphene film was disclosed (Thin Solid Films, 454: 494

The Grampian Express was a train service between Glasgow and Inverness, mainly hauled by steam locomotives on the Caledonian Railway from 1926 until the last was withdrawn in 1959, as well as a smaller service from Inverness to Aberdeen hauled by Class 13 diesel locomotives from 1958. The Grampian Express Coaches were built to the specifications of Caledonian Railway Locomotive Superintendent Mr. J.A. McIntosh and assembled at the Burywood, Darlington plant for use on the Caledonian Railway, working the Glasgow, Edinburgh and Aberdeen line from 1926-1958. These coaches were built to the extremes of the loading gauge, and were similar in appearance to U.K. Post Office Packets of the period. These Grampian coaches were built to very elaborate specifications, and were fitted to luxurious standards. The only major difference was the lack of compartment-jackets. The coaches were built in three series. Series 1 were built from 1926 to 1935, Series 2 from 1935 to 1937, and Series 3 from 1937 to 1958. The first two series each comprised 11 coaches built and assembled by 'one builder' in 26 and 52 weeks respectively. They consisted of a state dining saloon/summer parlour (H), a first class parlour (M), a Corridor/library (L) and a compartment/smoking room (A). The later series of 3 coaches were built by several different builders in 52, 42, and 22 weeks respectively. The middle coach (W) was a second class lounge, while the two end coaches (X and Y) were parcels vans. The coaches were fitted with systems of springs and bells, and were also very heavily insulated to reduce the noise to the next compartment. It was usual for all coaches to be used for the same services. The coaches were used on services to Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen and Inverness, as well as to all other stops on the Grampian Express, and were called the Grampian Express. Over 5,000 coaches were built on the Grampian Express production lines, and as many as 40 coaches are known to have been in normal service for some years. There are some missing coach parts that are know to exist, in the storage and spare section of the SL Rochdale Railway, as well as other sites across the UK. Partway through the production, the coaches were renumbered sequentially from 1 to 58. The reason for this renumbering
