I am using Win32API, but I get the following error: invalid argument I am using win32::SendMessage(WINEDEBUG_OUTPUT_WINDOW, 4, 0, 0) in order to get the input (in this case 0 is the user input). I am executing: raise WIN32API::Exception.new('error') if _FILE_ == $0 && _LINE_ == $ _ This is the ruby code I am using: require 'win32' namespace :test do desc 'Run the script' task :run, [:desc] => :environment do # Launch the test executable WIN32API.new.SendMessage(WINEDEBUG_OUTPUT_WINDOW, 4, 0, 0) end end I tested with a simple ruby script and it works, so I guess it has to do with the first command. Is there any way to do it, or a better solution to get the user input? A: SendMessage() takes hWnd - the window handle. So you need to get the handle of the output

Such facilities may be permanently installed in, for example, a manufacturing or production facility, or may be temporarily installed in, for example, a retail establishment. Commonly, such facilities have included one or more manually-operated dispensers for dispensing one or more cleaners, such as disinfectants or antimicrobials. While such dispensers generally work well in the intended applications, they tend to be relatively labor-intensive to operate and maintain. Further, in some situations, such dispensers are capable of dispensing more than one type of cleaner, such as a disinfectant and an antimicrobial. However, in such situations, it is possible that a user could actuate the dispenser to dispense a disinfectant, but inadvertently activate a mechanism that dispenses a different cleaner, such as a disinfectant and an antimicrobial. The discussion above is merely provided for general background information and is not intended to be used as an aid in determining the scope of the claimed subject matter.Automated control systems are known. An automated control system may include various elements, such as a controller, a sensor, a user interface, and the like. The controller may include functionality for receiving instructions from a user via the user interface and for providing controlled output to a controlled device via the user interface. In some embodiments, the sensor may measure a state or condition of the controlled device and provide a signal to the controller indicative of the measured state or condition. The controller may include a programmable processor, e.g., a 79a2804d6b
